Bio

Asa Awbrey was drawn to the legal profession because of the opportunities to help others and advocate for his clients. He values the trust clients place in him and takes pride in helping them navigate challenging legal issues and find a path forward.

After successfully completing the Huie summer clerk program, Asa now focuses his practice in the areas of automotive litigation and product liability, where he enjoys working closely with clients and serving as a trusted advocate when they need one most. He is committed to understanding the unique challenges each client faces and finding effective solutions. With an outgoing and persistent approach, Asa combines practical problem-solving with a strong commitment to providing his clients with dedicated representation.

During law school, Asa served as the Acquisitions Editor for the Cumberland Law Review, where he developed his skills in legal research, writing, and analysis. His work with the Law Review gave him valuable experience examining complex legal issues and communicating clearly and effectively.

Asa earned his bachelor's degree in Finance from the University of Montevallo, where he also played baseball. He earned his JD from Cumberland School of Law at Samford University.

Outside the office, Asa enjoys attending concerts and listening to live music, trying new restaurants with his fiancée, and keeping up with college football.
